

United States Department of Justice

Corey Amundson Chief, Public Integrity Section

Corey Amundson is Chief of the Public Integrity Section (PIN) within the Criminal Division of the U.S. Department of Justice. In that capacity, he leads federal prosecutorial efforts against public corruption and election crime nationwide, supervises the largest group of federal public corruption prosecutors in the country, and oversees many of the Department's most sensitive matters.

Mr. Amundson is a longtime public corruption prosecutor and senior Department executive who served for more than 16 years in the United States Attorney's Office for the Middle District of Louisiana, including as the United States Attorney (acting), First Assistant United States Attorney, Criminal Chief, Senior Deputy Criminal Chief, and Deputy Criminal Chief. He handled hundreds of corruption and fraud matters, prosecuted more than 200 federal criminal cases at the district and appellate levels, and has extensive experience successfully navigating complex, high-profile corruption trials.

Mr. Amundson also served as Director of the Office of Professional Responsibility (OPR), Executive Director of the National Center for Disaster Fraud (NCDF), Senior Counsel to the Deputy Attorney General (ODAG), and Fifth Circuit representative to the Attorney General Advisory Committee's (AGAC) Criminal Chiefs Working Group. He has received awards and commendations from the U.S. Attorney General, the Assistant Attorney General for the Criminal Division, the Director of the Executive Office for United States Attorneys, the Director of the Federal Bureau of Investigation, Internal Revenue Service Criminal Investigations, the Drug Enforcement Administration, and the Inspectors General for the Departments of Health and Human Services, Homeland Security, and Treasury.

Prior to joining the Department, Mr. Amundson practiced in the Special Matters and Government Investigations Group at the law firm of King & Spalding LLP in its Washington, D.C. office. He also served
